

A unique fixed income diversifier that can enhance income and reduce interest rate sensitivity

What's the strategy?

The Commercial Mortgage (Portico) portfolio strategy invests primarily in Canadian commercial mortgage investments, which seeks to generate more income than government bonds of a similar term, while creating a portfolio that is less interest-rate sensitive because of its shorter duration.

What's the approach?

This portfolio strategy leverages the expertise and experience within the Canada Life Commercial Mortgage team. The Canada Life Commercial Mortgage team sources, underwrites and manages the commercial mortgage deals. The Portico Investment Management team offers capital market expertise, portfolio management oversight and liquidity management. Portfolio managers pursue tested and strongly vetted processes within a culture of strong risk management.

Why invest in this portfolio strategy?

This unique portfolio strategy is a good complement to traditional bond investments and offers greater diversification through mortgages not typically available to investors, and access to highly specialized and experienced portfolio management. It also offers higher interest income than bonds of a similar term because of the higher yield premium on mortgages. The portfolio is less sensitive to interest rate changes due to a relatively shorter duration and therefore less volatile than the broad market.

Typical portfolio characteristics

Here's what you can expect to see from Portico's Commercial Mortgage fixed-income strategy:

- A portfolio of high-quality commercial mortgages geographically and sector (office, industrial and residential types) diversified across Canada
- Higher interest income than bonds of a similar term
- Shorter duration than the FTSE Canada Universe Bond Index
- A history of very low delinquency rates on its mortgage holdings – a testament to the fund's rigorous risk management and underwriting process.

Market review

The COVID -19 pandemic remains the focal point in all areas of the market, in terms of the commercial mortgage space, borrowers across the country have faced mounting pressure to provide payment assistance to beleaguered tenants. Lenders in turn have seen the number of requests from borrowers for loan concessions grow rapidly. The extent to which the national shutdown will ultimately affect real estate investment cashflows remains to be seen. This uncertainty has led to increased challenges in valuation as investors and borrowers try to determine if the impact to NOI will persist or correct itself in the short term. Government regulators have attempted to ease operational stress on the financial system with several policies. In March, the Office of the Superintendent of Financial Institutions (OSFI) announced it will allow banks to continue to classify loans with deferred payments as performing for borrowers affected by COVID-19. The announcement means banks will not be forced to hold additional capital on their books to offset these loans. OSFI also announced a reduction in the domestic stability buffer of 125bps, bringing it down to 1.00% to end the quarter. OSFI estimates the reduction will support more than $300 billion of additional lending capacity by Canada’s largest financial institutions. Grocery anchored, needs based retail has demonstrated resiliency in the current pandemic, while enclosed malls continue to experience negative pressure; e- commerce in Canada continues to eat into bricks-and-mortar sales at a rapid pace. Data from statistics Canada shows e-commerce sales have grown by 13% annually since 2016. Its share of total retail sales has grown by more than 9% annually over that same period. The implementation of social distancing and quarantine measures have had negative impacts on retail in general; it has proven to be beneficial to industrial real estate.

The critical role of industrial assets in the omnichannel and global supply chains is forecasted to increase and will ensure the sector remains well supported by strong fundamentals, on a relative basis.

Portfolio performance

During a quarter that concluded with the ongoing global health crisis and severe global market volatility, the fund produced a small positive single-digit return, but underperformed its benchmark (Commercial Mortgage Composite Index) on a gross return basis. As evidence of the conservative underwriting standards applied to this fund's holdings, no commercial loans were in arrears.

Portfolio activity

The fund had one renewal loan in the second quarter for approximately $2.5 million at a spread of 300 bps for a term of one year. There were no new commercial loans added to the fund. The portfolio's bond component continues to be maintained to ensure the liquidity of the fund.

Positioning & outlook

The portfolio remains defensively positioned with a focus on high-quality, conservatively underwritten Canadian commercial mortgages that are diversified across Canada by location, property type and borrower. Reflecting the high-quality bias, we seek to opportunistically add commercial mortgage loans located in major Canadian markets secured by institutional-quality real estate with full recourse to the borrowers. The portfolio management team believes the portfolio is well-positioned to acquire and maintain a high-quality, diversified portfolio of commercial mortgages to produce stable and predictable income with minimal default risk. In view of the deteriorating economic conditions in Alberta, the portfolio management team will cautiously approach potential near-term lending opportunities in that province. Instead, the team will look to other areas of the country that are performing well and providing good lending opportunities.
